The Union League Club Entertains Its English Guest

MR. FORSTER'S SPEECH

English and American Unity-The Guarantee of Peace and Liberty.

The Union League Club gave a reception last hight to the Right Hon. W. E. Porster, of Bradford, England. The company included distinguished citizens of all professions and political creeds.

Among those present were the Right Hon. E. ders, M. P., England; Cyrus W. Field, Charles Butler, Howard Potter, Royal Phelps, A. T. tewart, Peter Cooper, Jackson S. Schultz, Salem H. Waies, Dr. Chapin, Dr. W. Adams, W. E. Dodge, T. G. Acton, Judge Hilton, A. H. Hewitt, Judges dy, Van Buren and Lawrence; Mayor Vance ad Mayor-elect Wickham.

The company assembled in the theatre of the club about ten minutes past eight o'clock P. M., which was crowded in every part by distinguished guests. Mr. Joseph H. Choate, President of the guest of the evening, Mr. W. E. Forster.

MR. FORSTER'S SPEECH. —
Mr. Porsier said:—Mr. President and gentlemen, have often had occasion to lament that want of I have often had occasion to innent that want of power of expression which has accompanied me through life. I have often wondered why under such circumstances I should have taken so much part in public matters. I never regretted that deficiency so much as I do this evening. I know no time in the history of my life in which there was so much occasion for me to be eloquent. I can only say I never was so impressed, so overpowered by kindness, as I have been by your reception this evening. I try to imagine to myself that this reception is not to myself personally, and yet you are at great pains to show me that it is a personal welcome you give me. (Lond cheers.) I may say at the first mention of your invitation I thought it was hardly fitting for you so to honor me, but I suppose that it was not right to decline any meeting in which there was an opbetween the American and English people. 1 must not merely thank you for your kindness, for I am leaving your shores for England in two days from now. I am not able properly to express my thankfulness for the kindness I have received thoroughout your great country, and this not merely to myself personally, for this has been manifested to me wherever I was known and wherever I was unknown. There are mismakers who sometimes, through ecklessness and through malice, upon both sides ill will between these two countries. Therefore I m glad to take this opportunity of saying, that not only from Boston to the Rocky Mountains, not only from Niagara to New Orleans, I never heard e ment.on of my native country that an Engshman would not like to hear. THE CIVIL WAR

You, sir, Mr. President, have alluded to some facts connected with your great struggle in the noise the opinion of the President of this club, that as time goes on and history ripens between the American and English people, that you will find country than at the time of the civil war you sup-posed you had, and that you obtained these ends as the actual facts of the struggle became ore and more familiar to the public mind. This ernment of England. You said, and said with great truth, that there were many in our country who could not help being your friends in that great struggle. I can only say that I abhorred blavery from the time I first read a book. I should, therefore, have been utterly without excuse if I had not appreciated which was dependent greater issues and in which you were engaged. There never was a war upon which was dependent greater issues and in which the issue was of greater importance to the country engaged in that struggle. History will develop ge. It was a war that was to have two great resuits. It was to preserve the union of these States and it was to abolish the terrible evil of glavery. What would have been the result if you had not succeeded? You would have had no america; the country would have had the effect of dragging the nations of the world into a confict, one side or the other. As regards slavery, slave power would have obtained dominion over every portion of your tair country; in lact an impediment would have been put on the progress of civilization for many years.

EPPECT OF THE WAR.

There never was a war in which there was a greater stake for honor and which had greater results summed up in its consequences. Slavery was abolished in the United States, and, I believe, abolished in such a way that nothing can stand against it, and I fully believe abolished forever. No one can read your history and not discover by every tie that bound nations of one blood and of one race without seeing that nothing could be so destructive and of so great an evil as slavery.

These are facts that I acquired before I came to America. Travelling in your country has made me more earnest in this matter than when I merely read daily the accounts of your struggle ouring the time of your terrible war. There was great destruction of life on each side, accompanied by great sunfering, and I must say with greater heroism and greater endurance. But when I say that I do not say that it was on one side only. There were fellow countrymen of yours in the South. (Cheers.) They were Americans. (Cheer-). They showed that they were of English descent. (Laughter and cheers.) They fought, it was on the wrong side, but many of them thought it was not, but it was a bad cause. Many of fought against the Union and against slavery, for they thought that they were of fenglish descent. (Laughter and cheers.) They fought, it was on the wrong side, but many of them thought it was not, but it was a bad cause, Many of fought against the Union and against slavery, for hey thought that they were of English descent. (Laughter and cheers, or the many of them thought it was not, bu very long time any leeling of hatred but such that is productive of what your President has said, that which will enable you to make your country."

Confederate pecual on the floor of the House. I heard them say, as I went along, that they were fighting in different camps, and they were talking over the battles in which they had been opposed to each other, and they said that if there was any difficulty now it was not between those who lought, but it was between those who had not fought, but it was between those who had not fought, but it was between those who had not fought, but it was between those who had not fought, but it was between those who had not fought, but it was between those who had not fought, but it was between those who had not fought, but it was leaded to each other, and they said that it was a most terrible problem and a most difficult problem for you to deal with. Every man should consider the injustice of slavery and what slavery made the master. The problem is found in dealing with these men in their new situation. It is one that may well call upon you for all the forbearance, all the wisdom and all the patience of your people. It is for you to follow up the great progress which has already been made. I will tell you what, probably, you know much better than I do, but I will relate to you my experience of the little that have learned in the short tour I have made in the South. That tour has been to me of the most intense interest. We must remember that these men have become free despite of every discounting the strength of the problems which you have to settle. This greatly impressed me on my wish to the South. I found in several of the plantations that the ownership had changed, but that among other changes there was the fact that the slaves were free. (Cheers.)

WHAT MR. FORSTER SAW IN THE SOUTH.

There is aw men working hard, cutting down the canes. I remember that there were three men and women—colored men and women—at their rations. These are little fact, but there are a thousand such themsives to the new ritate of afairs, and to the new possession of their interties. I will not detain you much longer on this question, and will only say to you what I heard at a reception given to a gentleman—or what I think you call a secretade. A secretary what I was a policy that every partiot and every riend of the public must commend. He december of the was a policy that every partiot and every riend of the public must commend. He december of the was a policy that every partiot and every riend of the world of the country is depressed, as it has been in the United States for many months, the party in power is always held responsible for it, no matter what the real cause may be. Nevertheless, the report adds, there has been a user Ground for the there has been among the republican voters with the character of many of the candidates presented to them for public office, and this certainly operated to a considerable extent to promote the result. The report sliudes to the effort being made by the league, through its committee, to secure the nomination of unexceptionable candidates within the republican party to be voted for at the February election in this city. The report speaks of the failure of Congress to make an appropriation to the Centennial, and says it is to be regretted that the mistaken economy of Congress led it to refuse the contribution desired and threw upon the individual citizen the task which of right should have been discharged by the nation. It congratulates the public on the fact that through the liberality of the citizens, mainly of Philadelipnia, the success of the Exhibition is assured. The balance of the report treats of the membership, library and finances of the league. The number of members is 1,676.

THE "REVOLUTION FROM ABOVE."

The Berlin correspondent of the London Daily some extracts from the forthcoming pamphiet, "The Revolution from Above," with which Dr. Julius Lang is to startle the world. Subjoined is

body takes any notice of it, not even a bishop."

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent adds, in reference to these extracts, that Herr Julius Lang declares that they were sold to the paper by a Bayarian nobleman, and he threatens to divulge the names of those who originally furnished him with the revelations if further unauthorized publications are not prevented. Great interest is let in the matter, as high pensioned State officials and illustrious South German nobles are believed to have supplied Lang with his information.
